Press release - 2nd May 2005

Under the Sonae Sierra environmental management system

LoureShopping is awarded environmental certification for its building phase

LoureShopping, a shopping centre currently being developed by Sonae Sierra, is the first such centre in Portugal to gain environmental certification under ISO 14001 during its building phase, as a result of its management of construction procedures.

Awarded by Bureau Veritas (BVQI), this certification is awarded for implementing best environmental management practices on site, as set forth in Sonae Sierra's Environmental Management System. The aim is to minimize environmental impact and to encourage ongoing improvements in this field.

The system which has been implemented deals with environmental issues that arise during day-to-day construction management on site and manages them in an eco-efficient way. The consumption of natural resources (water, energy, fuel and raw materials), noise, waste water discharge and waste management are some of the areas covered in the procedures, which guide and regulate how the project is carried out.

Sonae Sierra's passion for innovation and its ongoing commitment to incorporating environmental management into all of its new projects have gained widespread recognition. Abroad, three Sonae Sierra developments in Spain have also received the same certification, the projects in question being Dos Mares in Murcia, Luz del Tajo in Toledo, and Plaza Eboli in Madrid.

For Sonae Sierra, environmental management during construction plays a major part in the development of its 'green centre' concept, which has been at the heart of the company's various developments over the years. Under this concept, measures to minimize the building's impact are included right from the design and planning phase.
